

E-Forward

E-Forward is a service that works together with Voice Mail to allow you to receive voice mail messages electronically through your computer. When it is activated, E-Forward will take any messages that are received in your voice mail box and forward them as E-Mail message to an address (or addresses) of your choice. You receive the voice mail message as sound files attached to the e-mail (sound files are in the .wav format that is compatible with almost all sound playback programs on your computer.) You can then permanently save voice mails if you want (by saving the attachment file) or delete them from your voice mail box using the Phone Central software interface.

This feature allows you to keep track of your voice mails even if you're on the phone and in front of your computer when another call comes in, you have instant access to the second caller's message. You also don't have to worry about a spouse or children deleting voice mail messages before you get the chance to hear them. Your voice mails are instantly relayed to you via your computer.